Subject: Ready for Use Refund Analysis Agent

Dear Arjun.

I have built a working tool that lets anyone on the finance or operations team ask simple questions about our refunds and get clear answers in seconds.

What the tool can do

Anyone can type ordinary questions in normal English. For example they can ask how much money we refunded in a particular quarter, which support agents have been giving the most refunds, or request a simple picture that shows the main reasons customers are getting money back. The tool then gives clear numbers and pictures right away.

Why this is useful for the business

We handle about six hundred and fifty refund tickets every week. At present, whenever someone needs numbers or a comparison, an analyst has to open the data files, clean them, calculate the totals, and prepare charts by hand. This takes time and slows down decisions.

The new tool removes most of that manual effort. The team can now see the biggest areas of refund spending very quickly. They can also compare one quarter with another and notice problems earlier. This should free up several hours of analyst time each week and help the company act faster on high cost areas.

Current situation

The tool is already working with our refund data from January 2025 through June 2026. It costs nothing to run at the moment. When I tested it with a good number of real questions, it gave correct answers most of the time. The tool is ready for the team to start trying.

I can show anyone how to use it in a short meeting. Later we can improve it further if the team finds it helpful.

Thank you for your time. I am happy to talk about this whenever you are free.

Kind regards,

Amit Maraseni
